Photoshop CC is an award-winning photography and digital imaging program used by millions of artists, designers and photographers. Whether you are a beginner or a pro, Photoshop CC has everything you need to create stunning images. It also gives you the power to curate and style your photos in real time as you work and share them on social networks like Facebook and Twitter. Photoshop Elements, Photoshop CC and Lightroom are also available on Mac OS X. Graphic Designers and Web Designers use Photoshop for various purposes. It is ideal for working with logos, graphics, photos, illustrations, and other graphics-related tasks. Photoshop is also a powerful tool for editing videos, animations, web graphics and other images. How Can I Join My Local Photography Group? Photography enthusiasts with an active online presence can use this guide to find local photography groups in their area. Photos.org is a free online directory and directory builder, allowing you to create one-click digital marketing tools that work for you. Google is also an excellent source for local photography groups. Enter your favorite search term in the search box and check out the local photography groups tab in the results. How Do I Join a Local Photography Group on Social Media? You can find a list of all the photography groups in your area on the members page, shown on the right sidebar. As @RichHarris mentioned, this is a fairly subtle and in the book, it is not answered. That's why I also think it's a great question and a bit confusing. You're getting different ways of working with the group, and the different ways interact with text (which is "global") in different ways. First of all, if the user goes in the group, the group will have the same order. If you have to group it up and then order, you want to use merge(), to turn it into a two-way merge, to be able to merge the two objects, and then sort, on the merged one. It should do what you want: $x = \{1,2,3,4,5,6\}$ $y = \{2,3,6,5,1,4\}$ $z = \{y,x\}$ $\text{merge}(z) \# \{2, 3, 6, 5, 4, 1\}$ $\text{sort}(\text{merge}(z)) \# \{1,2,a681f4349e$

The present invention relates to a lubrication system for moving parts of an engine, and more particularly relates to a lubrication system which supplies lubricant to the rotating shaft of an engine and is accompanied by a hydraulic pump that is automatically self-lubricated while the engine is in operation. The lubrication of the rotating shafts of an engine is essential to the proper operation of the engine. In particular, in an engine which is used in a vehicle, the rotating shafts move under a relatively high load and are continuously exposed to a wide range of temperatures. The types of materials which are used to construct the rotating shafts must be corrosion-resistant at the elevated temperatures to which the engine is usually subjected, and the rotating shafts must be able to withstand the torque which they must withstand while moving. These and other problems of the prior art are overcome by the present invention, and an improved lubrication system is provided which is effective in lubricating the rotating shafts of an engine. In accordance with a preferred embodiment of the present invention, an improved lubrication system is provided which is an automatic system which supplies lubricant to the rotating shafts of the engine as it is needed. In accordance with the present invention, a hydraulic lubrication system is provided which includes a base plate in which the engine is mounted, a delivery tube which conveys lubricant to the rotating shafts of the engine and which is connected by a hydraulic tube to a hydraulic pump disposed within the base plate. The rotating shafts of the engine are equipped with pump fittings, and the hydraulic tube, which is attached to the engine by the pump fittings, is connected to the delivery tube. The hydraulic pump is self-lubricated while the engine is in operation. Thus, the engine can be operated without lubricant being provided to the rotating shafts. The present invention also includes a control system for controlling the operation of the hydraulic pump. The control system includes a solenoid valve which can be controlled by pulses in order to actuate the pump. A magnetic switch is disposed adjacent to the solenoid valve to actuate the solenoid valve when the magnetic switch is disposed adjacent thereto. The magnetic switch may be either a reed switch or a reed switch type rotary potentiometer switch. These and other features and advantages which are achieved by the present invention will become more fully apparent as the detailed description which follows hereinafter is read in conjunction with the accompanying drawings. Q: Why does my (findOneAndUpdate) query always return null? My problem is, that the returned data is null always, even if a user with given id is in the database. What am I doing wrong? app.controller("WorkCtrl", function($scope, WL) { var user = WL.User.findOneAndUpdate({ id: 1 }, { $set: { name: 'name' }, $addToSet: { organization: 'organization' } }, { returnOriginal: false }, { upsert: true, multi: true }); console.log(user); // returns null }) A: That's just how it is; any changes you do (insert/update/delete) on the server are asynchronous to the call that is made to get the user. If you want to make sure you have the data updated on your client before printing to console, you need to make a few changes. You can either log the result of the query to the console directly after executing it, like so: app.controller("WorkCtrl", function($scope, WL) { var user = WL.User.findOneAndUpdate({ id: 1 }, { $set: { name: 'name' }, $addToSet: { organization: 'organization' } }, { returnOriginal: false }, { upsert: true, multi: true }); console.log(user); // returns null }) Or, if you absolutely must have the data updated on the client, you can manually trigger a refresh of the data on the client. This would look like so: app.controller("WorkCtrl", function($scope, WL) { var refreshUser = function(user) { WL.User.findOneAndUpdate({ id: 1 }, { $set: { name: 'name' }, $addToSet: { organization: 'organization' } }, { returnOriginal: false }, { upsert: true, multi: true }); console.log(user); // returns null } var user = W
