===== High speed JAY WALKING is perfect for a quick burst of mobile gaming fun. It's jay walking simulator with a twist - the twist is that crosswalks are NOT in the game and jay walking is something that must be actively avoided. A high speed, high traffic jay walking action game. Your goal in every single game is to get across each street avoiding any obstacles in your path. If you can overcome all of the obstacles in your way, you can then stand on the other side, safe and sound. There are various obstacles to dodge in each city and some streets are more difficult than others. For example, there are some games that are relatively straightforward and others that are very difficult. You will play games that have no in-game crosswalks, vehicles that are directly running you over and the list goes on. The more dangerous the game, the more time you have to beat your best time. The game is designed to be hard. Enjoy the simplicity of Cross Fingers running on a Track Ball - right tilt to change direction, left tilt to shoot. * Great for beginners, since there are no buttons to press to move around. * Very addictive! Find your way through four worlds. Play as the super cool Ghosts, and collect the gold coins to continue the game. Also comes with extra mode for shooting mode for better for you. also, Play Cross Fingers inside the Game Center, you can play with your friends over the World. How to Play: ===== (Touch and hold) Tap the screen to tilt your hand left and right. (Trackball) Touch the trackball to move the shot. (Hold) Hold the shot for longer time will make power-up shot. Story Time! By Falescha-ho, art by Betty Elgyn One fine day... Once upon a time... The story starts at midnight When all the kids are asleep... They haven't got a clue about what life is really about... Adventures are for the young, after all... Sunrise isn't an option, this is 11:59 AM and there's a long line to get to our school class. Tiredly, I drag myself into the morning, and I've barely got up as the bell rings. I roll over and click play on my iPod, expecting to snooze my way through another boring, teenage day, but no! A new, new adventure's about to begin. I have a new dungeon to explore! There's still time to have a quick bite, though... What the... Deadly monsters? Yes. The first floor in our dungeon wasn't destroyed, so there's no way for me to save the kids, or my character. On the second floor, I find a floor boss, who looks rather strange, and is made from mostly armor, few weapons, and no shield. It has a pretty nasty appearance and a very mean expression, as if it wants to eat my innards for breakfast. Despite the deadly monsters, my character manages to take a few wounds from the boss, but still, I can't save the kids... This is a great test of my skills and I still have it in me to create a good save game. After continuing to fight, I destroy the floor boss and find a treasure chest with some goodies. One of them looks like a potion with the power to heal. I refill my stamina and heal up as much as I can

Gaia: Soundtrack is the soundtrack album of the 2010 motion picture Gaia: An Epic Journey. It was released on April 7, 2011. It was released on vinyl, CD, and digital download formats. Background In mid-2009, at that year's 50th Anniversary of Gaia event, the illustrator Mark Frankel, while drawing images for Gaia in concert with the Gaia: An Epic Journey film crew and The Event Horizon team, began to compose and record a soundtrack that would integrate the action into the drawings. Frankel was asked to audition songs, and selected the common theme song "Summertime", composed by Jonny Greenwood for Tibet House Concert 2009 (Tibet House Concert: Jonny Greenwood, www.thc.org/), for Over the Top, in Julian Lloyd Webber's "The Right Side of Wrong". It would be performed live by the musicians during the event and was nominated for Best Live Performance at the British Independent Film Awards. It became the theme song for Gaia and was the first single released as a promo. Track listing

I was wondering how I can measure the acidity of a fermentation (fermentation pk)? The specific task I need help for is measuring the acidity of a Sauerkraut (with lemons) that is ready for bottling. I have read a lot of stuff about using refractometers, pH-meters, glass-sensors but I just couldn't find one that I can use on the plastic-krauts jar. So far: I figured that is not necessary to open the jar with corkscrew: A glass-sensor is not suggested as it needs liquid to work A refractometer is not suggested as it needs liquid to work (and it drains a lot and so on, too) How can I measure the acidity of a mixture that is inside of a sealed fermentation-jar? A: I don't think you can measure the acidity of something in a sealed fermentation jar, because there would be no way for a pH probe/electrode to get to the surface. But yes, the instructions on many kitchen and souring fermenting equipment/supplies lists will indicate the approximate pH of
